

January 22, 1917.—Working all day at the Legation. It has been clear and cold—cold but bitter, as Artemus Ward used to say, but a brightness gives it cheer. The Germans still deport the poor workmen—that awful crime is repeated daily, hourly, in this distressed land.